

Editorial

The journal is receiving lot of inputs from our neighboring country (SAFOG) contributors which is a good sign. The subscription has also increased in number. In this issue of SAFOG journal, an article Prof Rashid Latif Khan oration on the Challenges for Medical Education in South-Asia has been written by Dr Harshalal R Seneviratne of Sri Lanka.

The journal also focuses on many aspects of undergraduate and postgraduate teaching including the trend of shift of doctors from less to more developed countries.

Scientifically, the issue deals with many innovative issues in obstetrics and gynecology including the role of uterine artery pulsatility index in gestational trophoblastic diseases. A common complaint in pregnancy itching has been discussed in detail. Obesity, the new epidemic of the century, and its impact on pregnancy have been discussed. As we are committed to improving maternal health in South-Asia issues on maternal mortality have been focused upon.

The guest editorial is written by Prof. Hariharan Chella of DIMS, which deals with a sensitive topic of mind-body medicine in obstetric and gynecologic practice.

We invite all SAFOG member countries to promote and submit their valuable research in our esteemed journal of SAFOG.

Happy Reading
